THE BLACK LEG.

"A perfect wonder made her appearance amongst us some months ago; a nymph-like shape, a Venus in figure, the presence of Diana, Absalom's hair, (this latter was dated in the days of the Empire), gentleness, simplicity, innocence, no wit, little common sense, but a fascinating countenance, and beauty enough to spare to any one else who might stand in need of it; add to this a brilliant complexion, eyes that would drive one to despair by their provoking expression; in short, a very apple of discord amongst us.

"A week had not elapsed when the verses of La Fontaine

Doux est vif en l'air; une paille survent, Et voila le cercle allumé.

might with propriety have been applied to Malmaison. The first whisper was: Peter is the favorite of Mademoiselle de —. No Paul is the man—perhaps both at once? These rumors fly about; conjectures follow. We were under the sway of angry and tyrannical feelings. This state of things would have long continued, had not the Empress calling to me one evening, said:—

"M. de — I request you will tell me what is this black-leg of which so many stories are related."

"A black-leg?" I unconsciously repeated, as it happens when any thing is stated which we are unprepared to hear.

"Yes, sir, that unlucky spectre which under the guise of a colossal leg, covered over with black crapes, wanders about in the garden when certain persons at least have retired all to rest."

"I respectfully answered that such tricks as these had a been confined to me, for it was well known I was in the habit of stopping to them."

"Well, sir, I request you will take measures accordingly. I am fond of the days of chivalry as represented in romance, or at the theatre Freudian; but, after sun-set, and in this place, such scenes are highly blameable."

"It was now my turn to be angry; I knew and was assured, that the apparitions of the enormous black-leg were no invention. This hideous spectre has shown himself, for the last fifteen days, or rather nights, to speak more correctly. The servants of the household, the very companies of the guard, were already a prey to the terrors of superstition. Husbands returned to the company of their wives at an earlier hour; female friends slept together; and, with the exception perhaps of Her Majesty, the ladies no longer disguised their fears."

"I had for a servant a phelegmatic German, as strong as a Turk, as brave as Caesar; he attended me at my summons. I gave him my instructions: a bottle of wine, a pie, some bread, and ten francs, promising him double the sum if he consents to explore the park in the night time. He engages to do so. My mind being now at ease, I retire to rest. On awaking the next morning, I behold Moeur before me; he was a perfect phantom; he is no longer the same lively, quiet man I had hitherto found him; he is harassed, taciturn, and half intoxicated."

"What have you ascertained?"

"I beseech you, sir, give me my discharge."
"Your discharge! what for! you are dreaming!"

"I beg, sir, you will pardon my ingratitude;
but I have no longer the courage to expose myself willingly to a certain and sudden death.
I wish to quit France and return to Germany."

"I am amazed; what has occurred, what have you seen? I answer me!"

"If you desire it, I will tell you the truth."

"What a simpleton you are! was it to conceal from me what you might discover that sent you last night to run about the fields and keep watch in the park?"

"In that case, I will tell you that I have seen the black-leg; it spoke to me, and I must instantly quit your service under pain of an early death and eternal punishment."

"I was waxing angry, but checked myself, rose up, and, unable to get from this silly fellow any thing more than incoherent words, I granted him his request; he was to remain eight days longer in my service, and then take his departure.

"In the course of the morning, two soldiers of the battalion of old guard, which was stationed on duty at the Chateau, came up to speak with me. My German servant had told them of his mishap; they turned him into ridicule, and proposed to replace him, provided I could obtain their officer's permission to sleep out. I applauded their zeal, gave them some drink, settled the question of discipline with the commander, who consented to part for twenty-four hours with his two men, both excellent troopers, with huge mustaches, who with pointed bayonets have already caused so much terror to the living, that I assuredly calculated on their giving some alarm to the dead. Now, we cannot fail to have accounts of this black-leg.

"I watched the dawn of day with almost superstitious impatience; I am informed, at the hour of seven, that one of the grognards desires to speak with me: he enters my room.

"Where is your comrade?"

"In the hospital, sir."

"Has he been wounded?"

"May Heaven forgive you, sir; it is unfair thus to bring Christians into the presence of Satan."

"What! have you seen it?"

"No doubt I have; if I am on my legs, I am hardly the better for it. Nicholas is nearly dead with fright: the poor fellow never can recover from it."

"But what is it, after all?"

"The black-leg; you know all about it. I need not say more. Oh! the wretch how hideous!"

"Has it appeared to you?"

"Indeed, it has, soul and body, head, feet and hands."

"A leg? you talk nonsense."

"One might do so with far less cause for it.
I am going in quest of Monsieur le Cere, to confess my sins to him. Joking apart, it is a grand sight."

"I gave him his fee, and bit my lips. The alarm increases. On the approach of night, no one dares to stir a single step; we only hear of marvellous stories. The phantom has been everywhere; he has been seen in the gallery leading to the apartment of Mademoiselle M. ....

the poor girl is beside herself with fright.

"The lapse of a few days only added to the general terror. I was advised to apply to the police; but was reluctant to adopt this course knowing how much the Empress was averse to any intercourse with them. Nevertheless, Her Majesty still complained, and the mischievous imp persisted in his pranks. Stung to the quick, I wrote to the prefect and explained the matter to him. The magistrate replied that he would cause a more active watch to be kept round the Chateau, and sent me, at the same time, a young fellow not more than twenty years old, whom he extolled as an idle, vagabond, a cunning, had, a shrewd prowling gipsy, fit for any thing, caring for nothing in the world, but capable of lying hold of Satan himself, and though belonging to his gang, provided any one should be disposed to pay him handsomely for his trouble."

"In consequence of M. Dubois' letter, I sent for and questioned this sagacious agent. He related to me numberless affairs from which he had cleverly extricated himself. The present must be the case of a robber, he fears none; or of a lover, well then, he will lay hands on him. I advise him to walk along the galleries, and I gave orders accordingly. It was agreed that, if the phantom inhabited the Chateau, he would follow him to his den, and whistle by way of signal; if, on the contrary, the leg, effected its retreat through the park, he would,
on quitting the house, hasten to the garden, when, in order to give warning to the several sentries, he would fire a pistol. On hearing the report, the sentries thus put upon their guard, were to set themselves in motion, in order to cut off the retreat of the intruding visitor."

"This plan being arranged, I went to inform her majesty of it; she gave her approbation, was prepared for an alarm, and, thus admonished beforehand, would not be disturbed by it. — She promised, besides, the strictest secrecy; for the more I investigated the matter, the more I was led to think that the hollow leg might possibly be ***"

"I was now satisfied that the mystery would be cleared up; I evinced on the evening in question more cheerfulness than usual. I saw my cunning agent for the last time at eleven o' clock, and promised him a five hundred franc note if he succeeded in taking the delinquent. — All retired to rest at midnight. I remained from going to bed. I read, I wrote, but with distracted thoughts. A single idea predominated in my mind. I heard the report of a pistol in the garden, not far from the window of my apartment. .... I started, a second report was soon afterwards heard, then a third, and eleven in succession; it was a perfect skirmish.
Lost in conjectures, I descend the staircase, and hasten to the garden; all the inhabitants of the chateau, suddenly awake from their slumbers;
the sentries, the officers, all clear their way."

I proceeded to the spot where I expected to find my valet — no trace whatever of Ernest; but,
at the appointed spot, a large pool of blood recently spilt, and no human trace, nothing to complete the proof that a murder had been committed. I employed the remainder of the night in inspecting the park and the chateau, and making a minute search in every corner. I ordered the unfortunate young man to be hailed; I hail him myself: he has disappeared. From that moment, every trace of him was completely lost. The prefect of police himself could procure no account of him; this is what he apprised me of; but those eleven reports of pistol shot which the whole of Malmaison had heard as well as myself; who could have fired them?

"Nothing could exceed my confusion. I acknowledged my defeat to her Majesty, who said to me:

"All that is left for us to do is to give way to the phantom, and go to Paris; it will not follow us thither. I doubt of its returning here, when Napoleon comes back."

"Her Majesty, accordingly, took her departure with all the ladies. I remained, but from that moment I no longer had a crow to pluck with the black-leg, which discontinued its pranks.
Three months afterwards, Mademoiselle M. ....

married a general officer who made her a Countess; at the same time, a carrier left on his way with the porter of Malmaison, a high case, directed to me, carriage free. I was absent on business connected with my duty, but I returned three days afterwards. I imagined that some contractors of Paris had sent me various articles I had applied for; I had the case opened in my presence. There was removed from beneath a quantity of linen and lay an immense gaiter-board leg, covered with black crapes, and a false nose twelve inches long, hanging to it.

A DIALOGUE.

Delectable and Demonstrative.

"Isaac, have you paid the printers?" inquired an old lady of her husband, who was delighting the family circle by reading to them a fine looking newspaper—(excuse our blushes, for editors are as modest as maidens.)

"No, Rebecca, I have not," answered the old gentleman, adjusting his spectacles—"but you know it is only a trifle.—The printers, I see, give a very polite dun, but they cannot mean me, as I am one of their political friends, and at all events, my two dollars would be but a trifling moiety to them."

"Well, Isaac, if all their subscribers were to say the same thing, the poor fellows would starve, unless they could conjure their types into corn, and their press into a flour mill. And surely you, as their 'friend' should be more punctual in paying them, than if you were their political enemy; besides it would show your attachment to them, and the good cause which they advocate."

"I thought of settling my subscription when I was in town last," said Isaac, wincing from the rub, "but the money which I received for my produce was better than usual, and I did not like to part with it."

"Why, certainly, you would not pay them in bad money, Isaac?"

"No, my dear, but sometimes I am obliged to take uncurrent paper, and I prefer paying my debts with that, when I can get it off—O these banks, these banks!—Any way, that sort would suit the printers just as they don't keep it long. My neighbor Jenkins said he passed off some to them which nobody else would take and they did not refuse it."

"Shame on you Isaac!" exclaimed the good old lady, "you would not, I hope, imitate the example of that miserable fellow Jenkins—why he would Jew the parson out of half of his stipend, and pay the balance in trade."

"Yes, he paid the printers, grandma," interrupted a little flaxen haired miss who stood beside her grandfather's knees.

"Well, well; I'll call and pay them," said the old gentleman, not a little nettled—"for an article I read in their paper the other day, was worth twice the amount of subscription."

"And you know, grandma, you said that piece about the counterfeiters, saved you twenty dollars, which you would have taken from the Yankee pedler," again interrupted the little girl.

"Yes, it did so, Mary, and for that when I go to town, I'll pay off my old score, and next year in advance, into the bargain."

Mr Isaac—kept his word, like an honest man. And whether his conscience smote him about the uncurrent money, or because he was convinced of the excellency of the arguments of his amiable spouse and rosy cheeked grandchild, we cannot say; be that as it may, we assure our readers, that our pocketers rang with the laughable proof of friend Isaac's probity and patronage, until we paid our debt. Now, we feel assured, that if the good ladies in the town and country, and "throughout all creation," as that most veritable nondescript, major Jack Downing, would say, only knew how the heart and hand of the poor printer is gladdened and warmed by the welcome salutation of such a man as Isaac, they would read this paragraph to their husbands, and say in the language of the good old book, "Go thou and do likewise."

The following Toast was given by E. Richardson, President of the Philadelphia Typographical Society, at its late annual meeting:

"The evils of Rum.—It gets into our heads, throws us off our feet, puts us out of register and stirs, batters our forms, makes us to see ** on a cloudy night, causes us to make a wrong use of our G's and knock down the standing matter of others, brings us to f's points with our best friends, reduces us to the condition of floor pi, get us into the wrong box, brings us before the bar, and prematurely puts a period to our existence."

"Send them all to —," exclaimed a sac-religious ruffian, speaking to some paupers. — "Better send us to heaven, your honor, we shall be more out of your way there," replied one of them.

Marring because the Weather is Cold.— The Philadelphia Ledger advises bachelors to get married because winter is upon us. How does he know that they will be bettered by the change? There is no certainty of getting a warm wife. We sleep comfortably enough, though we sleep alone. There is no such botheration with us as married men have—such as your wife bawling out in the middle of the night, when you are enjoying a sweet dream,
"John take away your elbow!"

"James! lie further on the other side!"
"You'll have me out of bed."

"Joseph! you've kicked the liver off!"
"Henry! Get up, you lazy dog. It is day break."

"Richard! Turn out, and put on the tea-kettle!" &c. &c.

Nothing of this kind ever troubles us. There we lie, in our little cot, (which is just large enough for one,) with its clean white sheets spread over our person, and tucked comfortably in about the sides, and our head raised to a dignified height by having our corduroys stuffed under the pillow. How comfortable! We wish we were there now, instead of here. — When we go to bed, we never have occasion to exclaim, with the virtuous, yet self-upbrading Roman—

"We have lost a day!"

On the contrary, we stretch our weary body out to its full length, (we don't curl ourselves up in bed, as vulgarians do,) and say, in a tone of self satisfaction—

"Well, here lies a single gentleman, and an honest editor, type-sticker, and devil, after a hard day's work."

We then say our prayers, turn over on our left side, and go to sleep. We always sleep soundly, because there's no stains nor grease-spots on our conscience to prevent it. Our payer runs something after this wise: —

"Sweet powers! Grant that the Sun may have a good sale to-morrow, and that the little news-boys may 'fork over' the funds punctually. Grant that Mr. — will not push his bill against us till we are a little better off. — Grant that the buck-wheat cakes may not be all eaten before we get up. [We go in for flap-jacks.] Grant that the banks may resume specie payments when they have promised to do so. Grant that the world may grow better than it is, so that honest people like ourselves may stand a chance of getting a snack when they're hungry. Amen."—N. O. Sun.

CONJUGAL PASTIMES.—We heard of an old Blue Beard of a fellow, who enjoyed infinite sport in flogging his wife to death, in which manner he made away with about as great a number as that notable personage himself. A gentleman in the upper part of this city, though not with the same diabolical intent, thought to have a little amusement at the expense of his lady, and so proposed to give her an elegant silk dress, if she would hold her finger ten minutes in a mixture of salt and snow. The offer was readily accepted, and the experiment commenced. "It is cold," said the lady. — "Take it out, then," said the husband. "But the dress?" "Ah, you will lose it," said the husband. "I must have it," said the lady, and she persevered most heroically till the ten minutes expired, when on withdrawing her finger it might have been as easily broken off as any finger on the hand of Lot's wife, being completely frozen; and the husband has the double amusement of paying a round bill to his doctor.
This perseverance is excelled only by that of the lady who threatened if her husband refused her request to attend an entertainment, to cut off one of her fingers, and on his refusal actually carried her threat into execution; both abundantly proving the truth of the old couplet concerning woman, that

"When she will, she will—you may depend on't, When she won't, she won't, and there's an end on't."

A traveller upon one of the Jersey roads, during the wet season, paid his fare before starting. The road was very heavy and full of deep holes, that made it difficult for a vehicle to proceed. After having gone some distance, the wheels of the stage suddenly dropped into one of those ugly places, and the driver requested his passenger to alight and assist him in getting the vehicle forward. He acquiesced, and obtained a fence rail and pryed up one of the wheels from its embedded situation.

"I guess," said the driver, "you mought as well bring that ere rail with you—there's another hole here ahead."

So the traveller, with the heavy rail upon his shoulder, trudged along on foot. He relieved the wheel again, and was attempting to resume his seat in the stage, when the driver observed, "I'm not sure that there isn't another hole some distance off—I guess you'd better bring that rail along with you; and as the road is deep and muddy bring it on foot."

"Look here, said the traveller, at length provoked at this palpable imposition upon good nature—"I paid my passage—I've not much objection to walk—but to walk and carry this rail on my shoulder too—I'll see you damned first."

"Men," says a celebrated author, "will wangle for religion—write for it—fight for it—die for it! Any thing but 'give for it.'"

THE INSCRIPTIONS OF DIGHTON ROCK.— have been to multitudes a matter of great curiosity, and to antiquarians a "stumbling block," for centuries. Some have supposed that they were the work of the red men, while others are of opinion that we are indebted to the Northmen for these enigmatical hieroglyphics. The Society of Antiquarians at Copenhagen, who have for a few years past been busily engaged in collecting and deciphering musty Icelandic manuscripts, have, it is well known, published an elaborate work, containing many of these ancient records, which leaves but little doubt that the New World was discovered by the hardy navigators of the frozen North, as early as the eleventh century—that colonies were established by them in what are now the States of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, if not other parts of the continent, and that Christian Missionaries from that country, proclaimed the gospel in these colonies. But to return to the rock.—
The Antiquarians of Copenhagen have made up their minds that the inscriptions upon it, were carved by the Northmen, but Governor Everett has satisfied his one mind that this is not the case. In his lecture at the Warren street Chapel, on Tuesday evening, he stated Mr. Collin, in answer to a question from him (Gov. Everett) whether he had ever seen such inscriptions in the Indian country, said that he had seen hundreds of them on white quartz rock, and that if he had copied all of them they would have filled a volume of more than a thousand pages. He had seen a high wall of this beautiful rock, of some miles in length, completely covered with inscriptions of precisely the same character as those on the Dighton Rock.—Boston Transcript.

A Fishing Gramalkin. H.—B.—told me he had a cat, when at Eastport, that used to catch her own dinner. The store he kept in had a trap door in the centre, to draw water from the dock. There he would put down a line, occasionally and catch fish for his cat. Gramalkin had observed him do this, and one day, when his business led him to leave the life fastened for a few moments, on his return he found the cat bobbing the line up and down like an experienced fisher. He thought he would let her alone and observe her operations in secret.

He was soon surprised to see her haul up the line as fast as she was able, and secure it from slipping back, by putting her unemployed paw on it, until she had hauled in the whole line and made prisoner of the little fish, struggling at the end. After that, he added, he fixed the line and let pussy do her own fishing. [Portland

A Fascinating Gentleman. In Hutton's Auto biography is the following account of a father's attractions:

"Though my father was neither young, being forty-two—nor handsome, having lost an eye—nor sober, for he spent all he could get in liquor—nor clean, for his trade was oily—nor without shackles, for he had five children, yet women of various descriptions courted his smiles, and were much inclined to pull caps for him."

The following paragraph from the N. Y.
Star is an excellent hit at modern extravagance and heartlessness:—

"Oh, Bobby, my dear boy, don't blow your nose in my pocket handkerchief; I paid eighty dollars for it in Broadway?" "Why, in mother, if it aint to blow my nose on, what's it for?"

"Why, it's to carry in my hand to show, Bobby."

"For show, mother? pay eighty dollars for a pocket handkerchief for show. Well, now, that's queer, and when you went out to buy it, mother, you would not give sixpence to the poor woman and her child, what had nothing to eat."

Monomania.—There is a lady in New York who labors under the singular delusion of supposing herself to be a glass bottle destitute of a cork. She attributes her metamorphosis to having one day taken what she calls a "leetry stroke," and she is perpetually requesting her friends to cork her up, so that her spirit may be kept from evaporating.

Nigger Gentility.—Look here, Sambo, you got dat quarter dollar you owes me?
Sambo—La! Cuff, no. Money so scarce, so many stoppages in Mobile—there aint no money in circulation.

Cuff—O sho! Sambo, what de nashun you got to do wid Mobile? Nigger, pay up, pay up.

Sambo—Well, look here, Cuff—me hear masse tell more dan twenty men same tale; and I habnt seen no gentleman treat him like you treat me. Act like a gentleman if you is a nigger.

Sambo—No gentleman is a gentleman if him haint got no money.

A certain lodging house was very much infested by vermin. A gentleman who slept there one night told the landlady so in the morning, when she said—"La! sir, we have not a single bug in the house." "No, ma'am," said he, "they are all married, and have large families, too."

Legislature of Maine. IN SENATE.

SATURDAY, Feb. 2.

Mr. Dumont called up the Bill to incorporate the Maine Thompsonian Medical Society, and moved its indefinite postponement. Carried.

The Bill additional to an act entitled "an act against Hawkers and Pedlers and Petty Chapmen" approved Feb. 18, 1821, was taken up, read a second time, its further consideration assigned to Tuesday next, and, in the mean time, five hundred copies ordered to be printed.

On motion of Mr. Holden, Ordered, That the committee, on the Judiciary be instructed to inquire into the expediency of abolishing the office of Inspector General of Nails.

Mr. Littlefield moved a reconsideration of the vote, whereby the above order was passed, in order to obtain the reasons of the gentleman moving it.

The vote having been reconsidered—Mr. Holden gave as a reason for his Order, that he was opposed to the Statute Books being lumbered with useless laws, or provisions for useless offices. It was well known to many that this office was provided for by law and that an appointment had been made under it, when, upon investigation it was found to require no duties. By retrenching useless offices first, we might be led to look more into the matter, and retrench others, if there are any, that are, in any respect extravagant or unnecessary, and thus bring the administration of State office to an economy which would satisfy all.

Mr. Dumont hoped the office would not be dispensed with. Their should be no curtailment in this respect—there being so much demand for the article at present.

Mr. Littlefield then inquired of his colleague, through the Chair, whether any change had been made in the office within the last year or two.

To which Mr. Holden replied, that he could not say positively, but it was his impression that no change had been made since the office was first filled, some six or eight years since.

Mr. Smart observed that he was in favor of the order. He wanted retrenchment in this respect. He was not surprised the gentleman from Kennebec was not in favor of it. He recollected very well he was not in favor of such things last year.

Mr. Littlefield replied that if the late administration had not found the office of sufficient importance to remove the incumbent and reward one of its friends with it, at a time too when the "scramble for office" was so incessant and severe, that hardly a Democratic officer in the State was not removed, and a friend of that administration appointed, he thought it could not be of much importance to the public. If the same worthy incumbent now held the office that held it under the administration of Governor Dunlap, he hoped the office would not be abolished—but that the present Inspector General might still enjoy those honors and emoluments, which, even in the rage and madness for office manifested last year, the late Executive had not deemed it prudent to meddle with.

Mr. Holden explained—that however honorable the office might be—and that he did not for a moment question it—there were no emoluments attached to it—and therein probably, his colleague would find the reason why the office was not filled last year by some hungry expectant.

Mr. Belcher said, that if the last administration had not considered the office of sufficient importance to make a change in it, very likely the present would.

Mr. Bowles thought there might at some time be call for such an office, if there were not at present. And as the office did not seem to be of consequence enough to "scramble for," he hoped the order would not pass.

The question was then taken, and the order passed. Adj.

MONDAY, Feb. 4.

Mr. Littlefield, from the Judiciary Committee, to which was referred a bill entitled "an Act providing for the election of County Commissioners, Clerks of Courts and County Attorneys," reported that said bill ought not to pass.

Mr. Dumont expressed a hope that the report would not be accepted. If not, he should move to amend the bill by striking out that part of it relating to the Clerks of Courts and County Attorneys. He was in favor of choosing County Commissioners by the people. He believed that the people could better judge of the qualifications of County Commissioners than the Governor and Council. He was also in favor of the measure because he considered it democratic.

Mr. Littlefield said he was in favor of the acceptance of the report, and remarked that the suggestion of the gentleman from Kennebec (Mr. Dumont) did not meet his views. He believed that the objections to choosing county commissioners by the people were stronger than those against choosing Clerks of Courts and County Attorneys in that manner. He alluded to the excitement frequently got up in counties in relation to new roads, and that if the commissioners were dependent on the popular will for their appointments they would be much less independent in their action on the several subjects on which they were called to act than they are under the present system. Every road question in the County would be brought to bear upon the election and candidates would be brought forward and supported with reference to their views and opinions on certain local questions on which they might be called to act, and thus the qualification of candidates be made a secondary consideration. He said that the County Commissioners were chosen by the people in Massachusetts, and that it is with much difficulty that elections are effected. It was not an uncommon occurrence for the people to be called out three or four times before a choice could be made. As to the democracy of the measure, Mr. L. said that he should like to see more practice and less profession in his friend from Kennebec (Mr. Dumont). It is one thing to preach and another to practice, and he gave much more credit for the latter than the former.

Mr. Dumont in reply admitted that there was some force in the objection urged by the gentleman from Cumberland, against the election of the Commissioners by the people; and admitted that there were difficulties existing in Massachusetts, in effecting elections as stated by Mr. L.; but still he was in favor of the measure. He said it was a popular measure, and had for the last several successive years received the favor of the popular branch of the Legislature, and had been stopped in the aristocratic branch, the Senate. As to his democracy he was willing to throw down the glove—he would join issue upon that question here or elsewhere, with the gentleman from Cumberland (Mr. L.) who seemed to have democracy at his command.

Mr. L. in reply said, that he only wished to set history right in relation to the remark of the gentleman from Kennebec, "that this measure had met with favor in the popular branch for the last several successive sessions." Now the fact is (said Mr. L.) that at the last session, where according to his (Mr. Dumont's) ideas of democracy, a little more of that ingredient was infused into the House than usual, a bill similar to the one under consideration met with no favor whatever from the majority in that branch—but was summarily rejected.

The Report was then accepted by the following vote:—

YEAS—Messrs. Barker, Bradley, Comstock, Emery, Gross, Heagan, Holden, Littlefield, Osmond, Perkins, Prince, Shaw, Smart, Williams—14.

NAYS—Messrs. Belcher, Boutelle, Bowles, Dumont, Erskine, Jacques, Nott, W. M. Reed, Steward—9.

On motion of Mr. Erskine,

Ordered, That the Committee on the Judiciary be instructed to inquire into the expediency of providing by law, that no person convicted of crimes against the State shall be sentenced to the State Prison for a less term of time than two years—and also of providing by law that convicts in the County Jails may be put to hard labor, the jailors in each County being responsible for the safe custody of said convicts. Adj.

TUESDAY, Feb. 5.

The President laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of State, transmitting an account of costs in criminal prosecutions, and the amount paid to County Attorneys in each County. Referred to the committee on County Attorneys' fees.

On motion of Mr. Steward, ordered, That the Committee on State Lands be instructed to inquire into the expediency of securing by law the proceeds of timber cut on unincorporated townships of land, in which reservations were made for schools and other public uses, and of appropriating the same to the objects designed.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 6.

The Bill further regulating Judicial Process and proceeding was taken up, amended, on motion of Mr. Boutelle by the addition of a new section, and again laid on the table.

THURSDAY, Feb. 7.

Mr. DUMONT from the committee on the Public Buildings, reported a Resolve in favor of the Insane Hospital, together with a statement of facts in relation to the same. The Resolve was once read and the same, together with the statement of facts, laid on the table, and one thousand copies ordered to be printed.

The bill further regulating Judicial process and proceedings, was taken up, on motion of Mr. BOUTELLE, amended, and passed to be engrossed.

FRIDAY, Feb. 8.

Bill to incorporate the Farmers' and Mechanics' Fire Insurance Company was taken up, and amended, on motion of Mr. HOLDEN, by striking from the last line of the 11th section the word "ten" and inserting "six," so that instead of reading "at a greater rate of interest than ten per cent," it will read "at a greater rate of interest than six per cent," and then, as amended, passed to be engrossed.

Mr. HOLDEN introduced an order, which was laid on the table, directing the Secretary of State to procure from the officers of the different towns, &c. in the State a list of those individuals who have not received a portion of the Surplus Revenue.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, Feb. 2.

The Bill for the limitation of criminal Prosecutions, came from the Senate, that body insisting on its vote passing it to be engrossed as amended. The House receded and concurred.

Read once and Monday assigned—Bill to provide for the expenditure of the State Prison—Resolve providing for a survey and reconnoissance of a route for a Railroad from Portland to the Canada Line.

On motion of Mr. Mildram of Wells,

Ordered, That the Judiciary Committee be instructed to inquire into the expediency of establishing by law the compensation of Sheriffs for the distribution of certain Public Papers &c.

MONDAY, Feb. 4.

Mr. Hodsdon of Gorham, with leave laid on the table, a Resolve proposing an amendment of the Constitution, changing the time of the annual election and the setting of the Legislature, which lies over one day a rule of the House.

Leave to withdraw—on petition of Henry L. Noyes of Waterford for a military pension.

TUESDAY, Feb. 5.

Mr. French of Nobleboro' called up the bill to abolish the C. C. Pleas and establish District Courts, proposed several amendments thereto, and on his motion Friday next was assigned for its further consideration.

Resolve to amend the Constitution in relation to the time of holding the annual election and the sessions of the Legislature, was read once and laid on the table, and 300 copies ordered to be printed.

Resolve for a reconnoissance and survey of a route for a railroad from Portland to Lake Champlain came up, and, on motion of Mr. Levensaler was laid on the table.

The Report of the Judiciary Committee to which was referred the bill providing for the election of County Commissioners, Clerks of Courts and County Attorneys, that said bill ought not to pass, came from the Senate accepted. The Report was, on motion of Mr. Ous, laid on the table.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 6.

On motion of Mr. Woodman, Ordered, That the Committee on Literature, &c. be instructed to inquire into the expediency of altering the School laws in relation to the distribution of School money.

Mr. Cole of Paris, called up the Report of the Committee to which was referred an order relative to changing the time of the annual election and the sitting of the Legislature, that legislation upon the subject is inexpedient. Mr. Allen of Alfred, moved that the Report be again laid on the table. Mr. Cole hoped that the Report would be disposed of at the present time. There were before the Legislature, in addition to this Report, the Resolve presented by the gentleman from Gorham upon the same subject, which had been ordered to be printed. After this Report was disposed of, he would move a reconsideration of the vote ordering those Resolves to be printed. Mr. Allen was not prepared to act on this subject at the present time. Mr. Delesdernier hoped the Report would be laid on the table, and the House take time to consider whether they will propose a change of the time of the sitting of the Legislature, which would prevent all farmers from coming as members. Mr. Hodsdon of Gorham, said if they were excluded, it would be by their own vote—for by them the amendment to the Constitution must be made, if made at all. Mr. Delesdernier said, undoubtedly the gentleman from Gorham intended to play the same game in relation to this question that he did with the division of the surplus money in his own town, by which he got into the Legislature. He wanted a new hobby to carry him in next year. He had nothing to say against the gentleman from Gorham—he was a very valuable member of the House—but he thought there were people in that town he should prefer to associate with. Mr. Hodsdon thanked the gentleman—he took more pains to obey the will of his constituents than he did to please any man—and more particularly the gentleman from Baileyville. After some further remarks by different gentlemen, the yeas and nays having been ordered on the question to lay on the table, it was taken, and decided in the affirmative—yeas 118, nays 28.

Resolve to amend the Constitution relative to the Judiciary (changing the tenure to seven years, if they shall so long behave themselves well) was read once and on motion of Mr. Hobbs of Eastport, laid on the table and five hundred copies ordered to be printed.

THURSDAY, Feb. 7.

Bill for the relief of sureties on Poor Debtors' Bonds, in certain cases, (as reported in a new draft) was read a first and second time. Mr. COLE of Paris, moved to suspend the Rules so as to give the Bill a third reading at the present time. He said, as the committee had fully and carefully considered its provisions, and as the House had probably examined the subject, when it was before it in a little different shape, as much as it had desired—he hoped the bill would pass immediately—for actions on Poor Debtors' Bonds were now pending before the Court in one county, to be held in a short time. But the House refused to suspend the Rules, yeas 62, nays 44—not two thirds. The bill was then assigned to to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

Mr. COLE called up the Resolve proposing an alteration of Judicial tenure, and moved an amendment, which was adopted. To-morrow was assigned for the second reading of the Resolve, as amended.

Bill for the relief of sureties on Poor Debtors' Bonds was called up by Mr. ALLEN of Bangor, and after some remarks by him, the rules were suspended, and the bill passed to be engrossed.

FRIDAY, Feb. 8.

The Resolve proposing an amendment to the Constitution relative to the Judiciary, came up on its passage to be engrossed. The question on a proposed amendment to the Constitution, being required by the Rules to be taken by yeas and nays, the question on the passage of the Resolve to be engrossed, taken and decided in the affirmative, yeas 121, nays 48.

The Bill to abolish the C. C. Pleas and establish District Courts, came up on its passage to be engrossed. Mr. ALLEN of Bangor, offered an amendment, which was adopted, providing that the act should take effect from and after its approval by the Governor. Mr. STRE-

SON offered an amendment to strike out "$1500" (the compensation allowed to Judges) and insert $1200 which was also adopted.

Mr. YOSE of Augusta, could perceive no very material difference between the present Bill and the existing act establishing the C. C. Pleas. He supposed it was not so much the intention of the gentleman who got this Bill up to make any alteration in our present system, as to accomplish an ulterior object. He wanted the House to understand this. If it was the object of this project to get rid of one of the incumbents of that bench—if it was the intention to give him a side blow, it ought so to appear to the House, that they may act understandingly.

Mr. ALLEN of Bangor, said he would not deny that that was one of the desirable objects which would be accomplished by the passage of the Bill. But he denied that this would be all. An additional Judge would be placed upon the bench. The interest of the eastern section of the State demanded the passage of this bill—the people of that quarter complained, and not without cause, that justice was not administered "speedily and without delay," according to their rights under the constitution—that they might as well abandon a suit for a debt of $1000 as attempt to enforce it in Penobscot County, under the present arrangement. The docket of the Penobscot Court had on it thousands of actions undisposed of—and if this Bill did not pass, they would not be likely to be diminished, in consequence of the incompetency of a part of the Court. Justice to that County called for its passage.

Mr. YUSE said if to get rid of Judge Perham was the object (and it appeared by the gentleman's argument that it was) why not address him off?—why do indirectly what the Legislature have the power to do directly. He was opposed to this course of proceeding. He was opposed to reconstructing the whole system, simply to accomplish the removal of a single individual from that bench.

Mr. CUSHMAN of Dexter, said every man in Penobscot County was in favor of the passage of the bill; they had suffered long and much from the incompetency of this Court, and they now demanded to be relieved from the "law's delay." They had a right to this under the Constitution.

Mr. HARVEY of Glenburn, supported the bill; he was recently from Penobscot County, and the people were extremely anxious this bill should pass—they ask that justice in that County may be administered with greater promptness.

Mr. TYLER of Newfield supported the bill. Mr. ARLETON of Portland, had no objection, if the business of the County of Penobscot demanded it, that they should have an additional Judge. This could be done without overturning the whole system as proposed by the Bill. If it is the object to get rid of an incompetent Judge, that can be accomplished without taking this round about course. The constitution pointed out the method of proceeding in a case like the present—and why not exercise your constitutional power to elect and dis-advise course to do that which might be accomplished in a more direct and much better manner.

The bill then passed to be engrossed—yeas 81, nays 27.

Congressional Proceedings.

Senate Monday, Jan. 28.—In the Senate, the business of the morning presented more than usual interest. Among the numerous memorials was one from thirty two settlers in Oregon Territory, praying the extension of the laws of the United States over that territory, and drawing such a picture of the excellence of the climate, salubrity of the soil, and its natural advantages for trade, &c., as cannot fail to set the migratory tribes of bipeds, of which our country boasts so large a number, on the immediate march for homes beyond the Rocky Mountains. Also, there was a memorial from a clerk in the Patent Office, in relation to the manufacture of Sugar from the beet. This document was highly spoken of by Mr. Davis, as valuable to the country at large, and as an evidence of its worth, he moved for the printing of 5000 additional copies. Another memorial presented, was from owners and masters of Steamboats, praying a board of engineers to pass upon qualifications of persons presenting themselves for employment in the capacity of Engineers. The request is a salutary one—the memorials state that their lives and property are compromised from the ignorance and incapacity of persons setting themselves up for duties to which they are not competent, either from education or practice.

The president sent a communication to the Senate, covering all the correspondence with Great Britain, had since his last annual message in relation to the North Eastern Boundary question.—There was also a statement from the Treasury, in obedience to a resolution of the Senate, showing the relative circulation of the notes of the United States Bank with gold, &c. Mr. Benton said that the circulation of gold was more than double that of the notes of the Bank of the United States. 6000 copies of this document were ordered to be printed. Mr. Benton's bill, on leave to repeal the salt duty, came up for consideration, when Mr. Davis went at length into the subject. He repudiated the idea of the small tax imposed on it being the cause of its present price and maintained that the manufacture of the article here, so far from increasing the price, was one great means why it was so limited.

Mr. Williams of Maine, will deliver his views on this subject, in all probability, to-morrow.

The Senate went into an executive session, and adjourned.

House.—Mr. Haynes adverted to the importance of that portion of the President's Annual Message which relates to the next census, and moved a suspension of the rules for the purpose of going into Committee of the Whole on the Message.

After some conversation being Messrs. Haynes and McKennan, the motion to suspend the rules was negatived.

The States were then called in their order for resolutions.

Great Britain and the United States. The resolution offered by Mr. Cushing on Dec. 31st, asking for all the history of our relations with Great Britain, touching any pending controversy relative to Canada matters, presents to Indians in our territories from the English, the Eastern Boundary Question, the establishment of posts by the Hudson Bay Company beyond the Rocky Mountains, the boundary line from St. Mary's Falls between Lake Huron and Lake Superior, and so northwardly and westwardly along the frontier of the State of Michigan and the Territories of Wisconsin to the Rocky Mountains, was taken from the files and adopted.

Imported Hemp. Mr. Tillingham, on leave, introduced a bill for allowing a drawback of duty on imported hemp, when manufactured into cordage and exported. It was read twice and committed.

Election of Printer. Mr. Clarke submitted the following Resolution which lies over one day:—

Resolved, That the House, in pursuance of the Joint Resolution of Feb. 5th, 1829, will, on the 2d Monday in February next, at one o'clock, proceed to the election of a Printer to this House, for the 26th Congress.

A vast number of Resolutions were offered, and no other business was transacted.

In Senate, Jan. 29.—The Senate, to day, was principally occupied in discussing the motion of Mr. Benton, for leave to introduce a bill, for abolishing the duty on salt. Mr. Williams of Maine, who was entitled to the floor, addressed the Senate at length, and with much ability, in opposition to the object of the bill, though he intimated his intention of voting for its introduction, that it might be referred to an appropriate committee for the purpose of inquiry. Mr. W. was followed in the debate by Messrs. Benton, Davis, Buchanan, Niles, and Ruggles. The Senate adjourned without taking the question on granting leave.

In the House, the Postmaster General was called on for information on various subjects—among other things, he was directed to state what alterations, if any, may be made in the present rates of postages on Newspapers, Pamphlets and Periodicals.

Mr. Cambreleng, from the committee of Ways and Means, reported a bill making appropriations for preventing and suppressing Indian hostilities for the year 1830.

Also, with an amendment, Senate bill supplementary to the act establishing the Mint of the U. S.

Also, a bill to repeal the proviso of the second section of an act approved the 3d of March, 1837, which authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to compromise the claim of the United States against certain banks.—[It relates to the Allegheny Bank of Pennsylvania.] The bill, on Mr. C's motion, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading to-morrow.

The appropriation Bills were then proceeded to, and the "bill making appropriations for the protection of the northern frontier of the United States" was amended; and, after a brief discussion between Messrs. Cambreleng, Bell, Rice Garland, and Binson, was ordered to be reported to the House.

In the Senate, Tuesday, Jan. 31.—Mr. Clay presented a petition for Dr. E. Theller, claiming protection of the government from British condemnation, because he is a naturalized citizen—referred to the committee on foreign relations. Mr. Wall presented a report denouncing the bill to prevent the United States officers from interfering with popular elections—ten thousand copies of the bill and report, were ordered to be printed. The Senate went into an executive session for a while and then adjourned.

House.—Mr. Lincoln presented a communication from the postmaster general, showing the inadequacy and combustible nature of the building now occupied by the post office department. Mr. Chambers endeavored to introduce a resolution against some conduct of Commodore Elliot in the Mediterranean, but it was negatived.

The Speaker laid before the House a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, in answer to a resolution of the House of the 20th inst., giving a statement of the dates and amounts of official bonds of the collectors and naval officials at the ports of Philadelphia, New York and Boston, with the names of the securities of the said collectors, &c.; which was laid on the table, and ordered to be printed. The day was chiefly spent in attempting to suspend the rules, in order to introduce resolutions on various matters.

A horrid case of atrocity is related in the Chicago Democrat, of the burning at the stake of a young Sioux girl, aged 14, prisoner of the Pawnees. While her body was yet tremulous with expiring life, arrows were shot at her, and the flesh distributed to the savages, who committed this fiend-like act.

An iron steam ship to be called the Atlanta, of 1200 tons, is contracted for by the General Steam Navigation Company, to run between London and New York.

A new Definition of a good Husband.—Mrs. —, a poor woman, called at my aunt's begging, shortly after one of her daughter's had been killed. Having filled her basket with cold victuals, my aunt asked her, "what kind of a husband her daughter had got."

"Oh," said the old woman, "I rather guess he's a tolerable sort of a body, for he's got a long tailed coat and a ruffled shirt!"

A commission merchant was accused by an acquaintance, of having made "improper advances to a young lady," to which he replied — "O no, my dear fellow, her credit is not good enough to justify any advances."

"Make way, gentlemen," once cried a Massachusetts representative to the populace, who were crowding him out of his place in the procession on election day, "make way, we are the representatives of the people."—"Make way yourself," replied a sturdy, member of the throng, "we are the people themselves."

Female Influence. Sam Slick says, "though the men have the reins, the women tell 'em which way to drive."

A Boy in a Band-Box.—A man of business advertised in a Philadelphia paper "A Boy Wanted." The next morning he found at his door a beautiful and smiling specimen of the article desired, snugly deposited in a band-box.

Cheap Enough.—An editor and printer down south offers to sell his whole establishment for a clean shirt and a meal of victuals. He says he lived on promises till his very whiskers have stopped growing.

A writer in one of the Southern papers says that girls who eat the most, always make the best wives. "Give me," he exclaims, "a hearty lass who can spoil the side of a roasted turkey at a sitting, with gravies, and jellies to match."

"The bravest men in the world—those who are not afraid of a dun."

"The purest men in the world—those who do not scandalize their neighbors."

The following is a dunning advertisement of a butcher at Sacket's Harbor:

"I won't wait. I am about to leave this place—I have given you line upon tender line; you have skinned me and reduced me to a spare rib; and now if you don't pay me immediately, I'll skin you up to a constable with a book in his hand, at your cost.—A butcher's word for it."

"Why is wine like italie?" asked a printer. "Because it makes language emphatic," replied Shooting Stick.

Schoolboy's Questions.—Three boys at school learning their catechism, the one asked the other how far he had got? to which he answered, "I'm at a state of sin and misery." He then asked another what length he was? to which he replied, "I'm just at effectual calling." They were both anxious, of course, to learn how far he was himself, and having asked him, he answered, "Past redemption."

A Humorous Circumstance.—The Galway (Scotch) Advertiser says:—"Recently our turf market was thrown into a state of confusion by Gallagher, the ventriloquist, who, in order to gratify some friends with a joke, caused the ass of a turf-seller to be very eloquent. It appears that Mr. G. was buying the turf, when the ass suddenly exclaimed—'Pat! I'm confounded hungry!' Jennings instantly got in a state of the greatest agitation, and blessed himself over and over. 'What can this mean?' asked Gallagher. 'I don't know, please your honor, for I never heard him speak either English or Irish before: the Lord betune us and him!' continued Pat, 'I will leave him!' upon saying which the ass snorted and again said, 'I'm growing mad with hunger!' Poor Pat roared and fell upon his knees, and had a crowd about him, and the ass was so frightened that he scampered down the street; and Pat Jennings to this moment would not, for love or money, take home the sagacious ass. Gallagher and his friend thought it prudent at this crisis to cut."

COLLECTOR'S NOTICE.—Stoneham. ## ATKINSON'S EVENING POST, AND PHILADELPHIA SATURDAY NEWS.

A WEEKLY Family paper, devoted to Literature, Science, Arts, Foreign and Domestic Intelligence, &c. &c. published in Philadelphia, at Two Dollars per annum, payable in advance.

The subscriber having recently purchased the proprietorship of the PHILADELPHIA SATURDAY NEWS, a weekly Journal of wide circulation and high literary character, proposes henceforth to issue that paper in connection with his own long established and well known periodical, the EVENING POST. By the junction of these two Journals, the literary subscribers to the united publication will be among the greatest in the United States. To preserve and extend this ample circulation, the subscriber is determined to make every effort which his means will allow. Among the early improvements which he proposes to introduce, are:—the use of the best quality of paper and other mechanical changes, which will tend to make the Evening Post and News one of the most elegant weekly Journals in the country.

Upon the literary department of the Evening Post and News, the subscriber intends to bestow particular attention. The editorial management of the paper is committed to a gentleman of high reputed qualifications and character, and negotiations are now in progress by which the aid of the best talent in the country will be secured. With these accessions to the paper, the subscriber trusts that the Evening Post and News will be able to present to its readers a more valuable and interesting work than it has ever before presented.

To his two patrons, many of whom have received the Evening Post and News since its commencement, the subscriber offers his assurances that the same attention to the inclusion of sound morals, blended with profitable amusement and useful instruction, which in years past has secured their approbation, will still be directed to similar result; and to the patrons of the Saturday News, he offers assurances that the spirit, variety and abundance of the material selected for its columns, shall in no degree be diminished under his control. From the latter therefore, he confidently expects a continuance of the favors so liberally bestowed on his predecessors, which it shall be his earnest aim to merit.

Terms: Single number of the paper for one year, $2. Agents who favor us with five subscribers and enclose $10 in current notes will be entitled to an extra volume of the Post and a volume of the Courier for a year.

Particular Notice to those persons who wish to Washburn in Livermore, on the last Mondays of April and June next.

New Doctrine.

We will consider the brain and the spinal marrow as the great sources of the mind, and the seat of the volitions of the rational (reason) faculties, in which originate all our passions, pleasures, pains, feelings, affections, thoughts, and sentiments; and yet as the nerves form a part of our system, their healthy action depends upon the blood. If the blood be vitiated, the nervous fluid from the brain must be the same, and vitiated nervous fluid cannot produce healthy or proper action, thought, feeling or sentiment, so that madness, mania, melancholia, and every kind of crime or cruelty, may be legitimately traced to a bad or corrupted state of the blood.

From an unpublished work of Dr. Braudrich.

TESTES-FACTS.
1st.—All animal bodies originate from a fluid.
2d.—By the circulation of a fluid, animal bodies are formed, increased and supported.

3d.—This life giving circulating fluid is the BLOOD.
4th.—An ordinary man contains about three and a half gallons, or twenty eight pounds of blood.

5th.—About two ounces of blood are propelled by the heart at each contraction.
6th.—The heart contracts seventy times per minute, therefore all the blood in the body passes through the heart in three minutes.

7th.—The body is constantly subject to two distinct processes, viz:—decomposition and reorganization.
8th.—Reorganization is effected by the blood, which flows from the heart through the arteries, supplies the waste of the system, by restoring decayed parts.

9th.—The circulation returns to the heart through the veins, bringing with it those particles which have become deleterious through decomposition.
10th.—The more fluid of these deleterious particles pass from the blood through the skin in the shape of perspiration; but the gross humors are discharged through excretories into the bowels.

11th.—A want of proper action in these natural drains is the primary cause of all disease.
12th.—The natural outlets being closed, the decayed particles are retained in the blood, or said down somewhere within the body.

13th.—The particular kind of disease which shall ensue depends altogether on the part wherein the morbid humors may finally be lodged.
14th.—The brain humor, which when lodged in the liver, causes bilious complaints, venereal, if lodged in the lungs, causes consumption; or if in the membranes and muscles, rheumatism, &c.

15th.—All these derangements of the system, which receive the name of separate diseases, are, in fact, only so many different modifications of one effect resulting from one cause, viz:—the cause is THE IMPURITY OF THE BLOOD.

16th.—All effects cease when the cause is removed; therefore, all diseases, and all diseases MUST VANISH.
17th.—There is no effectual method of purifying the blood, except by the use of a vegetable plasma.

18th.—This vegetable plasma must be of such a nature that it may be taken for any length of time without injury to the digestive organs.
19th.—THE ONLY MEDICINE KNOWN to possess this property, is Dr. Braudrich's Universal Vegetable Plasma.

20th.—These pills have been brought to their present state of perfection eighty years ago, by Dr. William Braudrich, (grandfather to Dr. Benjamin Braudrich, the present proprietor.) who was one of the most celebrated Physicians of his age, in London, in order that he might discover a medicine which should at once purify and remove by perspiration all bad humors from the blood, by the stomach and bowels; and at the same time by acting harmoniously with the system, do no violence to the constitution.

21st.—The numerous cures that have been effected by these Pills, and recommendations of thousands who have used them, prove conclusively that Dr. Braudrich's Pills fully attained his philanthropic object.

22nd.—These Pills have now been in use over eighty years, therefore have ever published PRATFORD'S Universal Vegetable Plasma Pills were only another limitation of Dr. Braudrich, and their medicines resemble his in the name.

23rd.—THE BRANDRETH PILLS possess the UNRIPABLE power of completely curing the most inveterate disease; simply because they purify the blood.
24th.—Said Pills can be obtained GENUINE at any drug store either in the city or country—and as no impostors are known to be basely engaging in COUNTERFEITING them; those wanting the GENUINE, will be only safe from avoiding their stores.

DR. BRANDRETH'S OWN OFFICE IS IN HANOVER STREET, BOSTON. All persons who wish for Agencies must apply there.

All persons wishing the Counterfeit Pills will be informed by Fehony. NO COUNTERFEIT SELL THE GENUINE.
